

Next Level Learning

This fall, four jurors from around the country met to judge this year's Architectural Portfolio. When determining citation winners and other outstanding designs, this year's jury looked for the following criteria:

- Collaborative at both the student and educator levels
- Personalized learning
- Project-based learning
- Flexibility
- Active learning/active play/movement in K-12 spaces
- STEM
- Technology (PDA/device-driven education process)
- Resourcefulness in every part of the building (everything is a resource; how do we make it count and incorporate sustainability?)
- Agility of spaces (ability to transform quickly)
- Adaptation
- Lifecycle of building, systems
- Building/facility reflects community and functions as center of community
- Incorporation of security/safety
- Learning occurs EVERYWHERE
- Age-appropriate spaces
- Appropriate sense of place/culture 🌿

JOE AGRON

MARK N. DOLNY

DAVID M. VAN GALEN

MICHAEL (MIKE) WILBOURNE

"Inspirational project that, while broken down into separate career pathways, establishes strong continuity and community."

WILLIAM W. CAUDILL CITATION, P. 14-15

"A bold and simple gesture anchors the corner, provides light-filled spaces and deftly integrates the historic building."

LOUIS I. KAHN CITATION, P. 18-19

"Elegant solution that makes the most of its limitations to create spaces fully integrated within its site."

SPECIAL CITATION, P. 20

"Transformative facility that provides both a new center and a gateway to the campus, while setting up the college for a brilliant future."

SPECIAL CITATION, P. 21

"Compelling response to campus connectivity."

POST-SECONDARY CITATION, P. 75