

INSIDE OUTSTANDING

Three jurors from across the nation gathered in May to judge 2017's examples of the best in education design. In determining citation winners, the jury considered these criteria:

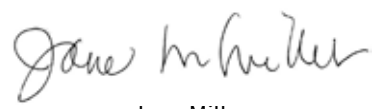

- How successfully does the design address the project vision?
- Does the project create a healthful indoor environment?
- How well did the designers take into account life-cycle costs of project materials?
- Does the project enhance the learning environment?
- Timelessness of design
- Functionality of the space ▲

Tony Almeida

Andrew McBride

Jane Miller

WHAT THE JURY SAID:

“Great use of flexible furniture. The flexible design complements the daylighting, which makes the space open and airy. The learning stair and choice of materials support the overall project.” p. 20-21

“The Walsh College Student Center is an inspired design that has created an environment where students want to be. The space has a professorial air about it” p. 22-23

“Stunning transformation! Love the variety of spaces and technology. Great job with lighting and graphics. The acoustical ceiling clouds are a great touch.” p. 24

“Great use of color and graphics to make the space come alive. Great job opening up the structure to allow natural light to filter to the lower level.” p. 25

“Beautiful transformation of an underutilized building into a new alumni center. The selection of materials complemented the historical features of the facility.” p. 26